DUTY OF CHRISTIANS

Evangelist Woolley Still Sowing at Tomlinson Hall.

Christian Voters Must Bear the Cross to the Polls-Too Much Tariff in Christianity.

Nearly two thousand voices joined in the opening song, "Rescue the Perishing," at Tomlinson Hall last night. The attendance at the good citizenship meetings is increasing, and more than half the seating capacity of the big hall was utilized. When John C. Woolley stepped to the front of the stage he dryly remarked that a sower went forth to sow. The audience laughed, and Mr. Woolley expected it. The evangelist has chosen this scriptural sentence as his text, and he sticks to it on all occasions. Herein lies his success. His audience is constantly on the lookout for his dry humer, sometimes tinctured with a biting sarcasm, and they are not disappointed. Some of Mr. Woolley's satirical shafts directed toward the modern churchman will doubtless shock the old orthodox Christian, but they bring out the people. Last night he said that he had a crow to pick with the Indianapolis press. One of the papers had quoted him with invoking a curse upon the head of the saloon keeper. This, he said, was untrue, or, at least, he didn't think he used the expression. If he did he wanted to apologize. However, he hoped the curse of God would fall upon the liquor traffic.

"There isn't a saloon keeper in Indianapolis," he said, "that I wouldn't crawl on my hands and knees to help. The worst luck I can wish them is that they will have to get out of the business and take up an honest trade."

Last night's meeting was opened with a prayer by Rev. Dr. Coultas, followed by a quartet, "Keep Your Ballots White." S. A. Haines, president of the State organization of the Christian Alliance, addressed the meeting briefly, and had a good word for the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League

Mr. Woolley opened his remarks with an apology to the A. P. A. and single tax societies, both of which he said had asked him to deliver a discourse in their interests. He feared that his opinions outside of the work he was in would not amount to much and he would be compelled to decline the honor. He returned then to his text and said that the sower who went forth to sow was a practical business man; he stuck to the work and succeeded.

"Now," said he, "I want to talk about Christian politics, not party politics. This matter of party politics is like the toothache. We catch it and it's acute for a time. Now no man is better than his party; set that down. The party is the very best there is to be made out of the people who compose it, and as a man thinketh into the ballot box so is he politically. The man is there because he belongs there. A man is not a Republican because of thinking. It's because he is a Republican, and when a man gets better than his party he is turned out of it. I want to talk Christian politics because there isn't anything of the kind, at least there is not much of it. Also for the reason that there ought to be more of it. If the apostle Paul should visit America he would tell you Americans that you are too superstitious. Now a superstitious person is one who stands over a thing, and it's true by the laws of philosophy that one who stands over a thing doesn't understand it."

"There are so many people so intently watching God that they can't see people They are so anxious to see God in the air that they don't see the foot prints of Jesus Christ in the mud and mire of Indianapolis. You have got to take up this practical cross like a man. It's heavy, but swing it; a hod carrier can't have a clerk. The cross of citizenship is the one the voter is entitled to make upon the candidate at the election. So many of our good people are determined to be angels, but they are denied the privilege. Now, I haven't any hope or desire of being caught up in the air; I am contented if I am permitted to walk with God on the ground in Indiana." "It would be good if we could hit upon some sort of a chemistry that would precipitate some of our Christianity into the ballot box. A Christian should be a man, Some people think he ought to be a good man, but that's extravagant and in advance of public sentiment.

Mr. Woolley here devoted himself to some practical suggestions as to the elements that go far toward making the manly Christian, and then had something to say about women. "We've done a great deal for her in Chicago," he remarked. "We have brought divorces down within easy reach of everybody. We have supplied her with a situation at half the wages a man gets for the same work.'

"Yes, we want man men in politics; that kind of a man who will feed the sheep, wash dishes-do anything. That sort of a man in politics will command the respect of everybody. Here's a story: When I was a boy there was a great big, white-headed fellow who used to lick me every afternoon, It didn't occur to me that I might give him thrashing, so I went on taking these lickings. One day, however, I picked up a board and split it over his head. It didn't hurt him; but I was master of the town. Everybody else was afraid of the big fellow, and he was afraid of me. Now, I body's head-and I don't care who gets hit there won't be a lick amiss. The boy at school, when asked to define the elephant, said that it was a big thing with four legs and a tail on each end. The politics of this country is like that elephant. I don't care which tail wags, it's the liquor element that controls the wagging. Political parties don't claim honesty or morality, and I am tired of this whining against them. All the Christian man has to do in politics is to keep his eyes upon God and he will come through all right.

"'I will guide thee,' says Jehovah, but how can he guide a crosseyed man; one who looks at the saloon with one eye and at God with the other. The bulk of the Christian sentiment in this country is expended either upon the McKinley or Wilson tariff bills. I am not saying anything against the tariff, but there isn't much Christianity about it."

The evangelist was reminded of the story of the Boston girl who was entertaining frequently the Indiana man. The Boston girl didn't think of marriage, but the Hoosier did. At length he proposed, but was refused because the girl did not think she was qualified to preside over the household of an Indianian. Matters grew embarrassing, and the young woman suggester that her would-be suitor take his He didn't stir an inch. Again she asked him to go, but he sat still. Finally the girl exclaimed, "Why don't you go? Indiana man coolly remarked: should be glad to go, but you are holding my hand."

"The fact is," said Mr. Woolley, "that the Christian man has saloon money in his pocket and he's holding the hand of the saloon man, while he tells him from the pulpit to go. The saloon man is no fool and he don't go. When it gets to be that the Christian is as earnest for God and the church as the saloon element is for the saloon there will be a victory. This work can't be done by homeopathic doses. We tried to put a prohibition bell on the licensed cat, but that didn't scare the rat worth a cent. There will be no saloons in this country when the church of Jesus Christ says so.'

Three Boys Rob a Store.

HE FEARS NO EPIDEMIC.

Dr. Hays's Opinion-George Williams

Is in Custody. Dr. Hays, of the Board of Public Health, yesterday stated that it was his opinion that smallpox would not become an epidemic in the city. He said that the policemen had come in contact with Higgins before the disease had developed sufficiently to cause any fear from contagion. He added that if Higgins had not been removed promptly to his present quarters and had been allowed to remain at the police station over Thursday night in all probability the disease would have been far enough advanced for the police officers and others to have been infected. He stated that developments would occur in a few days, and after that time the strain as to whether the disease would become an epidemic would be settled.

The condition of "Major" Higgins, the smallpox patient, remained unchanged yesterday, though his fever has slightly abated, and this fact leads the attending City Hospital physicians to believe that Higgins has some chances of recovery, though they are very slim.

Police Surgeon Kahlo yesterday gave it as his opinion that the quarantined officers at the police station could not show any symptoms of the disease before the middle or latter part of next week, if they have caught the contagion, which is not prob-

The police have been looking for George Williams, who slept in the "bum" room at the police station with Major Higgins Wednesday, the night of the discovery of Higgins's condition. Yesterday Williams was located on Washington street, between Mississippi and Missouri streets, by patrolmen Leppert and Knauss, who took him to the quarantined police station, where he will remain for the remainder of the siege.

Smallpox in a Hospital. CHICAGO, April 17.-Ten cases of smallpox have been found in the County Hospital here, and the institution has been quarantined. The health authorities have become seriously alarmed at the situation, and to-day inaugurated a house-tohouse search for new cases in the more thickly-crowded portions of the city.

Vaccinating the County Prisoners. Dr. J. H. Carson, the county physician, vaccinated twenty-three of the county prisoners at the county jail yesterday. To-day he will probably vaccinate the remainder, numbering about twenty-five. The workhouse prisoners will also be vaccinated to-

DID ALL THE HITTING

Pittsburg Finds Gayle Hard and Often and Wins Easily.

One More Game with Them To-Day-That Little Flurry with the Players Settled Satisfactorily.

There were eight hundred people at the ball park yesterday, and they watched Pittsburg do enough hitting to win two games. There was little satisfaction in the sight, but it must not be forgotten that Indianapolis is outclassed by Pittsburg, which numbers among its players some of the strongest hitters in the League. Both teams put up a pretty fielding game, Glasscock's two errors being all that marred Pittsburg's play, while, generally speaking, the home club played steadily. The latter, however, could do nothing at all with Terry, who pitched five innings, and very little with Gumbert after he warmed up.

Indianapolis was first at bat, and Mc-Tammany enlivened the crowd with a drive that hit pitcher Terry and bounded into left field, allowing Mac to reach first safely. Mills was thrown out at first by Bierbauer, Mac reaching second. A fumble by Glasscock let Leidy to first, and Graham went out from Glasscock to Beckley. McTammany was caught by Bierbauer, Mack and Lyons while trying to get home on Leidy's steal. For Pittsburg Smith struck out on the first three balls pitched, and the crowd thought that Gayle was going to give them another taste of his Cincinnati prowess, but Donovan spoiled the prospect by a safe hit, and the irrepressible Beckley hit the ball to right, as usual good and hard, sending Donovan to third, while he himesif stole second a moment later. Donovan came in on a wild pitch, and Glasscock hit safe to left for two bases, scoring Beckley, Graham threw Stenzil out at first and Lyons struck out, ending the inning. In the third Smith got a base on balls, stole second, and went on to second on Snyder's overthrow. Donavan's double to right brought him home, and the latter stole third. Beckley flew to Mills and Glasscock to Gray, Donavan scoring on the last out. Stenzel hit to left for a single and stole second. Lyons got a base on balls, but was forced out at second by Bierbauer's hit to Graham.

Indianapolis did not score until the sixth inning, getting, during the first five innings, but one hit off Terry. In the sixth Gumbert was substituted for the latter, and McTammany led off with a beautiful drive to left for two bases. Mills fouled out to Mack, and Leidy hit to right for two bases, bringing McTammany home. Glasscock fumbled Graham's grounder, but retrieved the error a moment later when he doubled that player and Devinney on the latter's hit, which was fielded quickly to second and first. After that Gumbert was very effective, Indianapolis not getting a man to base in the last three innings. In the sixth Pittsburg added four runs. After Bierbauer had gone out on a fly to Mc-Tammany Mack got a base on balls and Terry hit safe. A passed ball advanced the runners, and Smith was retired from Devinney to Plock. Donavan hit safe, however, scoring Mack, and Beckley got in one of his two-base drives to right, sending in the other two. Glasscock and Stenzel hit safe, and Beckley came home, but Lyons forced Stenzel at second, retiring the

In the seventh Bierbauer's single, a base on balls and safe hits by Smith and Donavan gave the visitors another, and in the eighth Beckley's double, Stenzel's long drive to left for three bases and Lyons's single earned two more. Leidy had a pretty running catch and Mills did some clever work. The light hitting of the home team gave Pittsburg very little opportunity for any display of fielding. The two teams will play their last game this afternoon. Score: Indianapolis. A.B. R. H. O. A. E. McTammany, m 4 Mills, 2..... 2 Letdy, 1 4 Graham, 3..... 4

THE CLUB ALL RIGHT.

Everything Settled and the Players

All in Line Again.

Passed ball-Westlake.

Umpire-Murphy.

Time-1:45.

Monday night's baseball sensation had but a brief existence and Indianapolis is in line again all right, everything being adjusted between management and players. The latter have, without exception, signed new contracts, conforming to the newly-discovered requirement of the Western League's constitution. What that organization appears to need just now is a president who will scrutinize its contracts carefully and see that they are all right before approving and promulgating them. It is true that President Golt fell into error on this first month rule but the president of the league. who handles every one of the contracts, should have detected the mistake and returned the contracts at once. The first one signed was that of Mills, on Thanksgiving day, and it, together with Graham's. was formally approved and promulgated by President Johnson, Jan. 6. On March 12, at Milwaukee, that official handed Manager Sharsig the balance of the Indianapolis contracts in his hands, not a word being said about any irregularity. Three weeks ago last Saturday President Golt went to incinnati and while there saw President Johnson, who informed him that every one of the Indianapolis contracts were irregular and must be made to comply with the five months' rule or a penalty of $1,000 would be imposed. He further said to Mr. Golt that he must make the best arrangement he could with the players, who could play only a five months' contract, dating from April 25. Since that time the management has been trying to fix things up without success, until yesterday, when matters were arranged satisfactorily. The players are feeling all right and now understand where the blame rests for the little hitch that came near resulting so unfortunately for both them and the management, as well as the Indianapolis public and the Western League. A man named Long, who is at the head of the Toledo club, is mixed up in some way with this trouble. He seems to be President Johnson's adviser, or to have the latter's official ear to the extent of interfering with the Indianapolis club's players and business. Long should be sat upon very hard. Possibly, the Indianapolis club can do the sitting when Long's team comes this way early next month. It is to be hoped so.

They will come pretty near landing the pennant this season. At the games Thursday and Saturday the admission will be but 25 cents, including a seat in the grand stand. COPELAND IN A FRENZY.

(Concluded from First Page.) Harris was associated with Mr. Winter in the defense of the Coffins and A. S. Reed, and opposed to him in the Copeland-Bruning litigation. W. H. H. Miller seemed to be the center of attraction in the court room, and lawyers, witnesses and auditors, who had heard many different accounts of the shooting congregated about him while he told just how it all happened. Ferd Winter was also present in the room and had, apparently, fully recovered from the excitement through which he had passed. Upon the cuff on his left wrist was a large blood stain, which had come there in the efforts of Mr. Winter to restrain Copeland. A number of persons in the room spoke jestingly about Mr. Winter always being present when these exciting affrays come up, and it was recalled that he was at Danville, Inc. seeeral months ago when the Brown-Wesner shooting affray came up, in chica Wesner was killed. The shooting will undoubtedly, cause the withdrawal of Mr. Harris from the defense in the bank case, as he will be unable to attend the trial.

Copeland Temporarily Insane. A Madison telegram states that persons who talked with Copeland before he left there yesterday morning freely express the opinion that he was temporarily insane. His actions at the jail seem to confirm the opinion. He does not talk in a very connected manner on any subject. When asked a question he will answer in a dazed manner, or sometimes does not answer at all for a few moments, and then will lead off on a subject entirely foreign to the conversation.

Bruning Resting Easy. Mr. Bruning was resting easily at a late hour last night at St. Vincent's Hospital. He was unable to talk on account of the brace put on his mouth by his surgeons.

Amusements.

There are but two more performances of Charles A. Loder and his excellent company in "Oh, What a Night!" at the Park Theater, this afternoon and to-night. Large audiences enjoyed the performances yesterday. Charles Loder, Mina Gennell and the rest of the performers entertain in inimitable style for two hours and a half. The Hilarity Trio remains the most popular feature of the clever performance. To-morrow matinee, Hart's Boston Novelty company opens for the balance of the week. It comprises a score of first-class variety performers, and the bill offered is a good one throughtout.

Under Another License. Perry Evans, bartender for E. N. Howard, the saloon keeper on Fort Wayne avenue near New Jersey street, was arrested last night by patrolman Mackassey on a charge of giving away liquor without a license. Evans stated that Howard recently bought the saloon and was doing business under his predecessor's license.

Bert Herbert's Grave Crime. Bert Herbert was yesterday bound over to the grand jury in $2,000 bond on a very grave charge. He appeared before Judge

Stubbs and denied the charges which were preferred by a small boy and waived examination. Song of Coxey's Brigade. We're marchin' on to Washington,

Our ragged coats we jerk; We're howlin' through the country,

We Don't Want Work!

We're wadin' through the farm yards

Where the fattest chickens lurk;

We're feastin' on the country. Don't Want Work!
